THE MCKNIGHT FOUNDATION

The McKnight Foundation sought a change in its environment that would reflect the company's values and goals. They wanted to move from their traditional downtown Minneapolis office into a more interesting, appropriate and less formal warehouse facility that would provide both office and public program space.

Keewaydin identified the parameters for a site search, focusing on existing buildings and new projects in the Minneapolis area. The search located a proposed new building that would be constructed in the Mill Ruins along the Mississippi River, which would also house the Minnesota Historical Society. Keewaydin completed lease negotiations with the building's developer to include space for McKnight in this project. We are currently providing project management services for the project.
